

Public Policy Studies Declaration of Specialization Sequence

The public policy specialization is a selection of three courses making up a sequence that represents a sub field in public policy. These courses can be any of the 200-level courses (or higher) offered in the University (in Political Science, Economics, Sociology, Human Rights, International Studies, etc.) in various combinations. Students may satisfy their specialization requirement:

- by taking three 200-level (or higher) courses with some logical connection to one another
- by taking three courses beyond the introductory course in one discipline other than public policy
